A story that will linger in your memory long after you're done reading

Elliot West has been head of the South Jersey Gay Men's Choir for more than a decade. They've performed everything from Christmas carols to songs from hit Broadway musicals.

He gets the most surprising gig of his life when his choir is hired to perform a song that's a bold change from anything they've ever done.

Unable to pass up such a strange job, he signs his choir up. And when he arrives at the theatre, he finds out there's something even more compelling than the bizarre comical song.

One of the dancers catches his eye, and the next thing he knows, this strange and absurd performance becomes the setting for a blossoming romance.

Of course, things aren't always what they seem.

This is a 15,000 word standalone contemporary mm gay romance novella with no cliffhanger.

Content Warning: This story is for readers 18+ due to mature situations.
