Community Care and the Law Luke Clements, Pauline Thompson

Community Care and the Law is the leading text for lawyers, policy workers, local authorities and voluntary sector advisers and carers. At its heart, community care concerns the provision of assistance to allow vulnerable people with special needs to live independently, either in their own, or in residential care, homes. Consequently, community care law impacts on healthcare, education, social services, housing, support for asylum-seekers and, fundamentally, human rights.
